Persuasive texts are alphabetic, visual, and aural. You may be persuaded by an essay, an image, a video, or a song, for example. What is the best way to persuade in the age of the Internet? How do you analyze a situation and decide on the genre, format, and mode of persuasion? English 1413 will provide you with an opportunity to explore a variety of issues such as identity, ethics, and technology in order to develop a sophisticated understanding of the means and methods of persuasion. The course links textual analysis with production: you'll create such things as videos, websites, traditional essays, photographic essays, podcasts and more. (No prior experience required!) Rhetoric has always been about discovering the means of persuasion: this course examines rhetoric through a 21st century lens.

ENGL 1413.703 CRITICAL ANALYSIS & WRITING II (honors)
CID13290 MWF 1:30PM-0220PM M307 Miller, S
We sometimes talk about literary works as if their meanings are hidden somewhere inside them, lurking mysteriously "between the lines" or "under the surface." Accordingly, we read "deeply," as if exploring the dark and distant corners of abstract textual interiors, where profound secret truths lie in wait. In fact, though, fully understanding literature involves as much zooming out as zooming in.
Reading a literary work responsibly often entails looking "beyond" the work itself, reading history, biography, criticism, and more. In this class, we will examine the relationships between literary works and their historical, biographical, critical and other contexts by reading, researching and writing about fiction by well-known authors. By studying literature in context, students will learn to find, interpret, evaluate and synthesize different types of sources and to produce scholarly writing in various forms.
(max:18)

ENGL 1923.001 GREAT WORKS OF LIT (H)
CID13291 MWF 10:30AM-11:20AM M101 Sears
Our theme is stories within stories - ways that authors use more than one story or perspective to create a total work. From the Arabian Nights to Agatha Christie and Toni Morrison, we'll read mostly shorter fiction and novels that include stories within stories, multiple plots, dual realities, mysteries, stories that suggest a backstory, interweaving stories, stories that go backwards, stories from different points of view. All readings are acclaimed masterpieces. If you love a good story and like to experience different ways of telling a story, consider this class. There will be response papers and three short essays, no exams. (max:30)
The course is designed to encourage the student to reflect on the relationships among language, text, and culture. We will cover topics such as (but not limited to) linguistic determination, gender, and multi-lingual societies. Students will reflect on these relationships by working with both a textbook as well as primary sources. Students will participate in small group and large group discussions about topics and readings. Also, students are required to show they have reflected individually on topics in both an oral and written capacity. (max:30)

In this honors section of "Introduction to Literature," we will study literary works from a range of time periods and genres with a view to (1) developing critical thinking, reading and writing abilities that will benefit you in your endeavors across the curriculum and (2) exploring cultural "difference" in various forms. What social, economic, and political factors influence literary representations of marginalized individuals, groups and issues? What are the consequences of those representations? Gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity will be considered with reference to novels, short stories, poetry and drama. Seminar discussions will seek to capitalize on the rich variety of perspectives that honors students with wide-ranging academic and personal interests can bring to the study of literature. (max:15)

Honors English 2413 introduces students to three major literary genres: fiction, drama, and poetry. In this section, we will read a range of works, from Edgar Allan Poe's short story "The Cask of Amontillado" and Wole Soyinka's tragedy Death and the King's Horseman, to the works of highly acclaimed poets across time periods. Close reading and critical thinking are two primary skills that students will develop as they analyze the elements of literature. English 2413 additionally fulfills the university's diversity requirement; this course aims to prepare students to "critically analyze historical and contemporary examples of socially constructed groups in American society or culture." English 2413 introduces students to texts written by authors from diverse cultures and backgrounds. (max:15)

ENGL 2543.001 SURVEY BRITISH LIT I
CID13323 TR 9:00AM-10:15AM M206 Mayer
From Beowulf to Boswell - a thousand years of literary history. The course treats key texts and writers like Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, Chaucer, The Faerie Queene, Milton, Behn, The Rape of the Lock, and Dr. Johnson. It also aims to see those writers and works in the context of the changing nature of Britain from the Anglo-Saxon period to the beginning of the modern age. Along the way, the class will read and discuss epic poetry, romance, lyric poetry, satire, tragedy, comedy, and prose fiction. Tastes good and it's good for you too. (max:30)

ENGL 2543.002 SURVEY BRITISH LIT I
CID13324 MW 9:30AM-1020AM M202 Elliott
This course is an introduction to the literatures of the British Isles from the end of Roman occupation to the end of the Long Eighteenth Century, or, per the University catalog, from "The beginnings through the Neo-Classic Period." While the course will substantially treat the long-established canonical authors and works of literature from that period (Beowulf; Chaucer, Canterbury Tales; Malory, Le Morte d'Arthur; Shakespeare; Milton, Paradise Lost; Swift; Pope; Johnson), it will also make a decided effort to integrate and investigate important texts from the periods frequently omitted from similar surveys. The focus of the class will be on developing familiarity with the literary - and thus a large part of the cultural - history of the English-speaking world so as to recognize its continued manifestations in the cultures of the English-speaking world of the late Twentieth and early Twenty-
First Centuries. (max:30)
ENGL 2653.002 SURVEY BRITISH LIT II
CID13326 MWF 1:30PM-0220PM M212 Austin
The Romantic Period to the present. (max:30)

ENGL 2773.001 SURVEY AMERICAN LIT I (D)
CID13327 TR 3:30PM-4:45PM CLB317 Gaboury
The Puritans through the Romantic Period. (max:30)

ENGL 2883.001 SURVEY AMERICAN LIT II (D)
CID13328 MWF 11:30AM-12:20PM M208 Miller
Embracing the rich diversity of literature from this historically eventful period, this course will provide a survey of 19th-, 20th- and 21st-century American texts from a range of genres, developing students' ability to read, think, write and speak critically about literature with reference to literary and cultural contexts. Throughout the semester, we will explore the ways in which literary works can suppress or give voice to marginalized perspectives, analyzing representations of gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity across the canon. The course as a whole seeks to enrich students' appreciation of literature from this period by fostering an atmosphere of intellectual questioning and creative exploration. (max:30)

ENGL 3030.001 FICTION WRITING
CID13330 TR 12:30PM-1:45PM M208 Cox
3 credits, max 6. Prerequisite(s): 2513. Directed readings and practice in writing fiction with special attention to techniques. (max:18)

ENGL 3173.001 WORLD LIT II (H, I)
CID13334 TR 12:30PM-1:45PM M212 Hallemeier
In this class, we will read literature that raises questions about going to class. We will consider how novels from countries such as Kenya, Egypt, and Australia suggest that institutional education can be not only a ticket to freedom, but also a distraction from injustice, or even a form of imprisonment. Authors will include Ngũgĩ wa Thiong'o, Nawal El Saadawi, Ama Ata Aidoo, Doris Pilkington, and J.M. Coetzee. Regular class attendance will, perhaps perplexingly, be mandatory, as will two essays, a presentation, and a final exam. (max:27)

ENGL 3190.001 RDGS POSTCOL LIT: Coming of Age in Indigenous Lit
CID13335 TR 12:30PM-1:45PM LSW202 Smith, L
This course coincides with scholarship in Indigenous studies on global Indigeneity within the broader frameworks of settlement studies and postcolonial theory. We will study Indigenous writers and filmmakers of Hawaii, New Zealand, and Samoa, including Patricia Grace, Albert Wendt, Sia Figiel, Witi Ihimaera, Victoria Kneubuhl, and Kaui Hart Hemmings. Course requirements include class leadership assignments in addition to essays and exams. Attendance and active participation in class discussions are mandatory. This course connects with a travel course I am teaching in Hawaii over spring break. For more information about how to participate, see http://asoutreach.okstate.edu/study-abroad/44-travel-courses/travel-2013/175-hawaii-2014 (max:27)

ENGL 3123.001 MYTHOLOGY
CID13331 TR 9:00AM-10:15AM M204 Eldevik
Tales of gods and heroes from ancient Greece and Rome, by authors who include Hesiod, Homer, and Ovid. The impact of Greco-Roman mythology on English literature. (max:27)
ENGL 3203.001 ADV COMPOSITION
CID13339 TR 12:30PM-1:45PM SCPA126 Smith, B
Prerequisite(s): 9 hours of English. An advanced writing course based on contemporary theories of composition. (max:18)

ENGL 3223 (all sections) PROFESSIONAL WRITING THEORY
Various CIDs, days, times, locations, instructors
Major theories, issues and methodologies in professional writing. (max:27)

ENGL 3343.001 READINGS IN POETRY
CID20388 TR 12:30PM-1:45PM PS121 Perlow
This course familiarizes majors with key concepts for the interpretation of poetry. It assumes no previous knowledge of poetics, though aficionados are welcome. We will explore poetic syntax, rhyme, meter, figural devices, and verse forms, asking how these shape the experience of reading a poem. The class addresses a wide array of poems, from Shakespeare to slam poetry; but we will focus on innovative poets of the twentieth century - such as Ginsberg, Plath, Stein, and O'Hara - in order to see how experimental poets both draw upon and renovate traditional poetic techniques. (max:27)

ENGL 3373.001 READINGS IN NONFICTION
CID20504 MW 2:30-3:45PM BUS234 Decker
Autobiography in America: Mary Rowlandson to Alison Bechdel Beginning with a 17th-century captivity narrative and concluding with a 21st-century graphic novel, this class will sample the fascinating variety of American autobiographical expression. Authors: Mary Rowlandson, Elizabeth Ashbridge, Frederick Douglass, Harriet Jacobs, Frank Conroy, Malcolm X, Alison Bechdel. 3 papers, a final exam, and an in-class presentation. (max:27)

ENGL 3410.801 POPULAR FICTION: Bestsellers (Tulsa)
CID20236 M 4:30PM-7:10PM TNCB106 Takacs
This course will examine the phenomenon of the best-seller. Beginning with Uncle Tom's Cabin--the book that allegedly inspired the Civil War--and continuing to the present, with The Hunger Games, we will read some of the most popular American literature of all time. We will also try to determine what made these popular texts so popular--marketing, accessibility, timing, or other factors. Note that the course is Tulsa-based. (max:27)

ENGL 3453.001 HIST OF AMER FILM (H)
CID13367 TR 10:30AM-11:45AM M305 Menne / LAB T 5:30PM-7:30PM M305
A history of American cinema told in somewhat nonchronological fashion, this class will treat a set of motifs that can help organize studies of American cinema, such as technology and experimentation (in early cinema and the postwar avant-garde); body genres and spectatorship (melodrama and slapstick); Hollywood and studio styles (Warner Brothers); genre and industrial production (the Western); independents and auteur studies (Alfred Hitchcock, Coen brothers); digital cinema (Pixar and Mumblecore); and business models and “tentpole” movies (“The Dark Knight”). (max:27)
ENGL 3473.001 RACE, GENDER, ETHNICITY IN AMER FILM (D)
CID13368 TR 2:00PM-3:15PM M303 Takacs / LAB T 3:30PM-5:30PM M305
This course will survey the representation of issues of race, gender and ethnicity in American film from the early days of the medium through contemporary times. Texts for the course include: Harry Benshoff and Shawn Griffin's America on Film, plus a series of essays available online. This course fulfills the D and H general education requirements and may be taken under either the ENGL or the AMST prefix. (max:14)

ENGL 4013.001 ENGLISH GRAMMAR
CID20772 W 4:30PM-7:10PM M301 Loss
This course is a survey of English grammar. We will describe the set of structural rules that govern the composition of words, phrases, and clauses in English. We will look at how structures have changed and how structures are used in writing. This is a course that values effort and critical thinking. You will need to memorize terms and concepts, but the course material does not stop there. You will also need to use problem-solving and critical thinking in order to understand the complicated structure of the English language. (max:25)

ENGL 4043.001 TESOL
CID20732 TR 9:00AM-10:15AM CLB322 Bakos
Designed to develop the skills and techniques needed in teaching English to speakers of other languages (TESOL). Examines the theoretical issues behind the practice and methodologies and classroom techniques, including the testing of English and the selection and preparation of teaching materials. (max:25)

ENGL 4063.001 INTRO TO DESCRIPTIVE LING
CID13373 TR 10:30AM-11:45AM M304 Caplow
This introductory linguistics course will focus on the fundamental building blocks of the field: phonetics (sounds), phonology (sound patterns), morphology (word formation), syntax (sentence structure), and semantics (meaning). Our primary focus will be on English, but you will learn about the structure of other languages of the world. Assessment will be based on homework assignments and exams. (max:25)

ENGL 4093.801 LANGUAGE IN AMERICA
CID20782 T 4:30PM-7:10PM T-NCB225 Schick
The goals of this course are to familiarize students with regional, social and cultural variations in American English; current issues concerning language education and policy in the USA; and give students a social and historical perspective on the above. There will be an exam, a project (group presentation and paper), and homework assignments (related to weekly readings). (max:25)

ENGL 4170.001 20TH CENTURY BRIT LIT: Magical Realism
CID13375 TR 10:30AM-11:45AM JB103 Hallemeier
A nose with telepathic powers, a bar full of "part-time human beings," an inheritable scar, and a terrorist organization with an acronym problem: such phenomena are par for the course in magical realism, a genre that incorporates the fantastic into reality and thereby exposes reality as fantastic. Our course will examine magical realist novels that are frequently funny, even as they consistently demand serious reflection on histories of nationalism and violence. Authors include Salman Rushdie, Ben Okri, Zadie Smith, and Zakes Mda. (max:25)
ENGL 4210.001 19TH CENTURY AMER LIT: Bestseller and the Book
CID13376 MW 2:30PM-3:45PM M305 Walker
Seduction, betrayal, murder, moral outrage, mystery, romance - these are the narrative engines of nineteenth- and early twenty-century America's most popular stories, bestsellers often published as sequels (Charlotte Temple and Charlotte's Daughter), as series (the Horatio Alger and Tom Swift boys books), as serial installments (Bleak House in Harper's New Monthly Magazine), as subscriptions (Huckleberry Finn), as pulp fiction (Riders of the Purple Sage), and as bestsellers turned into popular Hollywood films (Tarzan and The Thin Man). What texts were popular and why? What is the nature of the book and the author, the publisher, and the reader? How did the idea of authorship (and copyright) develop? What can our reading (a historie du livre) of these works today on the page and on the stage tell us about the society that produced, and then, by the millions, consumed them? (max:25)

ENGL 4263.001 MOVING IMAGE AESTHETICS (H)
CID20389 MWF 12:30PM-1:20PM M303 Uhlin / LAB M 5:30PM-7:30PM M303
Although we think of the artwork as an original creation, in reality artists adapt, borrow, allude to, and steal from each other continuously. Whether it is Hollywood producing its latest reboot of the Superman series, independent filmmakers utilizing found footage, or diehard fans creating mash-ups posted to YouTube, borrowing and stealing from the past is a fundamental part of our culture. This course examines various forms of imitation, appropriation, and sometimes outright pirating of moving images, from Gus Van Sant's shot-by-shot remake of Hitchcock's 'Psycho' to the "sweded" films of 'Be Kind Rewind'. It will ask questions about the ethics of borrowing, the value of an artistic commons under threat from overzealous copyright infringement, and how users/fans can repurpose their favorite texts. (max:25)

ENGL 4320.001 POSTMODERNISM: Postmodernism vs. the World
CID13377 TR 3:30PM-4:45PM M206 Perlow
Postmodern thought questions the relation between the actual world and our strategies for representing and remaking it. Often preoccupied with maps, models, and simulations, postmodern literature visual art explore what happens when an imitation seems authentic. Through techniques such as remixing, pirating, and plagiary, postmodern texts ask whether political resistance remains possible in a world controlled by global corporations whose simulated ideals seem better than the real thing. This course introduces students to some fictions and concepts central to postmodern thought. Among others, we will read fiction by DeLillo, Acker, and Pynchon; poetry by Creeley, Goldsmith, and Tan Lin; and criticism by Hutcheon, Jameson, and Lyotard. (max:25)

ENGL 4640.002 ADV POETRY WRITING
CID20393 TR 2:00PM-3:15PM CLB301 McLarney
As advanced poets, you will work at the most sophisticated undergraduate level, writing poems of your own and exchanging thoughtful criticism of classmates' poetry. The end goal of the course is creation of a portfolio. While much of our class time will be devoted to workshop, most weeks, the class will also read and discuss a published volume of contemporary poetry. All of the assigned texts are comprised of series of poems. We are focusing on series because they invite us to consider how poetry collections are organized and assembled. At this stage of your development as a writer, you will be beginning to accumulate your own body of work, investigating how your poems function together, and identifying which are representative of the style you want to cultivate. (max:18)
