Explores four major literary and cultural movements from 1785 to the present: Romanticism, Victorianism, Modernism, and Postmodernism. Beginning with nineteenth -century Romantic and Victorian poets, we next read a novella from the turn of the twentieth century, Joseph Conrad’s Heart of Darkness. As we transition into the twentieth century, we consider Modernist poems by Hardy, Yeats, and Eliot, moving to examine connections with Postmodernism. We end with a close look at contemporary texts that discuss themes of identity, specifically those associated with language and nationality. The course integrates a range of assignments to include quizzes, exams, discussion board postings, and individual projects.

ENGL 3813 - Readings in the American Experience: Harlem Renaissance (DH)
CRN:29609 Instructor:Hollenbach, Lisa TR 0900 -1015 M202 Campus:STW Max:15
This course investigates the African American cultural revolution of the 1920s and 1930s known as the Harlem Renaissance. Symbolically centered in Manhattan’s historically black neighborhood, yet national and even international in scope, the Harlem Renaissance represents a dynamic period of artistic innovation, racial consciousness, and social activism. We will focus on the literature of the movement in the context of other expressive arts as well as intellectual and social history. Readings to include fiction, poetry, and essays by writers such as W. E. B. Du Bois, Countee Cullen, Jessie Redmon Fauset, Angelina Weld Grimké, Langston Hughes, Zora Neale Hurston, Nella Larsen, Claude McKay, Jean Toomer, and Dorothy West. Assignments include 2 short essays, a research project, and exams.

ENGL 4013 - English Grammar
CRN:21304 Instructor:Loss, Sara TR 1030 -1145 CLB206 Campus:STW Max:25
This course is a survey of English grammar. We will describe the set of structural rules that govern the composition of words, phrases, and clauses in English. We will look at how structures have changed and how structures are used in writing. This is a course that values effort and critical thinking. You will need to memorize terms and concepts, but the course material does not stop there. You will also need to use problem-solving and critical thinking in order to understand the complicated structure of the English language.

ENGL 4063 - Introduction to Descriptive Linguistics
CRN:21305 Instructor:Loss, Sara TR 1400 -1515 CLB217 Campus:STW Max:25
In this introduction to linguistics, we will analyze and describe language from a scientific perspective, laying a foundation in the core areas of the field: phonetics (sounds), phonology (sound patterns), morphology (word creation), syntax (sentence creation), and semantics (meaning). Class sessions will consist of lectures, data analysis and problem solving, and discussion of reading assignments. This is a course that values effort and critical thinking.
ENGL 4083 - Applied Linguistics
CRN:29610 Instructor: Crowther, Dustin MWF 1230 -1320 CLB318 Campus:STW Max:25
Applied Linguistics refers to the study of language within real-world contexts. Using the global spread of English as a starting point, students enrolled in ENGL 4083 will survey the different ways in which English is used and studied across the globe. Topics will include language variation and change, language education and policy, the link between language, identity, and culture, and more analytical approaches such as forensic linguistics.

ENGL 4130 - Prose Narratives
CRN:29611 Instructor: Jones, Edward MWF 1130 -1220 M304 Campus:STW Max:24

CRN:26868 Instructor: Link, Stephanie MWF 1130 -1220 CLB317 Campus:STW Max:10
This internship is designed to provide instructional support and professional mentoring for students seeking the undergraduate certificate in TESOL (Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages). Prerequisites: (ENGL 4013 and ENGL 4043) or permission from instructor.

ENGL 4210 - American Second Stories
CRN:29612 Instructor: Walker, Jeffrey MW 1430 -1545 M303 Campus:STW Max:25
American storytellers may have penned original stories as an answer to the challenge that "no one in the four corners of the globe reads an American novel," but within these narratives a competing story, or a "second story," exists to counter or pose a threat to the dominant culture's ideology. Just as Cooper's Leather-Stocking admits "there are two sides to every story," so, too, do these second stories provide a fresh interpretation of the American experience, whether political, historical, ethnic, racial, or sexual. Find out how many silent sides there are to a story.

ENGL 4340 - Postcolonial Literature and Human Rights
CRN:29613 Instructor: Hallemeier, Katherine TR 1530 -1645 CLB317 Campus:STW Max:25
Since the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948, the language of human rights has both proliferated and come under scrutiny. In order to better understand contemporary conversations about human rights, we will discuss fiction, creative nonfiction, and poetry that confronts scenes of state violence, forced migrancy, and environmental catastrophe. We will consider how postcolonial literature can participate in and exceed legal visions of justice, even as we turn to this literature as an occasion to analyze some of the concepts upon which appeals to human rights depend, such as equality, dignity, and even humanity itself. Big questions call for incredible writers. These may include J.M. Coetzee, Shailja Patel, Teju Cole, and Arundhati Roy.

ENGL 4350 - Contemporary International Cinema (*)
CRN:29853 Instructor: Uhlin, Graig TR 1230 -1345 M303 LAB: T 1530 -1720 M303 Campus:STW Max:19

ENGL 4563 - Scientific & Tech Lit
CRN:29615 Instructor:Sicari, Anna MWF 1330 -1420 M202 Campus:STW Max:25
In this course, we will explore students’ experiences with writing beyond composition courses. As we immerse ourselves in the histories of writing instruction across academic disciplines, and analyze disciplinary conventions and rhetorical moves, we will read and study what writing looks like in other disciplines and the complexities and challenges that come with entering a discourse community. We will specifically look at what science writing looks like in both academic and public spaces and think about how technology informs writing in all disciplines.

ENGL 4620 - Advanced Creative Nonfiction Writing
CRN:29616 Instructor:Childers, Sarah TR 1400 -1515 M306 Campus:STW Max:25
This semester, we’re going to focus on the creative nonfiction subgenre of flash nonfiction. All of the pieces that you write will be 1000 words or less, so you’ll have to develop your compression skills, tightening your language and choosing the most vivid images, and you’ll develop your skills at focusing in tightly on a moment and/or idea. We’ll explore a variety of ways to write flash nonfiction, reading and writing narrative pieces, lyric pieces, memoir pieces, and personal essays that include research. The class reading will include short pieces from the journal Brevity as well as from the anthologies Brief Encounters: A Collection of Contemporary Nonfiction, edited by Judith Kitchen and Dinah Lenney; the Rose Metal Press Field Guide to Writing Flash Nonfiction, edited by Dinty W. Moore; and In Brief: Short Takes on the Personal, edited by Mary Paumier Jones and Judith Kitchen. Each student will workshop 4 flash nonfiction essays.

HONR 3000 - Hip Hop in America: Honors
CRN:30300 Instructor: Belton, Andrew MWF 0930 -1020 GU105 Campus:STW Max:22
On the track, “American Dreamin’,” from his 2007 American Gangster album, emcee and industry icon Jay-Z provides an important intervention into our critical thinking about the precarious nature of pursuing the American dream at the end of the twentieth and start of the twenty-first century. Speaking to (and for) millennial and postmillennial generations, Jay-Z elucidates how old attitudes about attaining success and wealth in the United States, as promoted under the banner of the “American Dream,” require reexaminations of our national heritage. Specifically, Jay-Z challenges the notion that education and hard work are ultimately what provide opportunities for social mobility and prosperity, and instead champions a narrative and ethos of American criminality as truer to attaining recognition and riches in the United States. // This course will investigate the nuances between criminality, illegality, and American dreaming as dramatized within hip hop as a cultural form, and particularly as can be explored in the biography and discography of the African American emcee Jay-Z. Conflicts that arise between racial identity and pursuits of the American dream, as well as regional, class, and gender dynamics important to the “pursuit of happiness” in the U.S. will also be investigated.

AMST 3683 - Introduction to Digital Humanities
CRN:30265 Instructor:Jackson, Rachel W 1430 -1715 M105 Campus:STW Max:10
This course combines the values of the humanities, local community engagement, and digital storytelling to understanding Stillwater’s local cultural, historical, and rhetorical landscape from a Native perspective. Working with elders in the Iowa Tribe of Oklahoma, located south of Perkins, OK, students will learn Indigenous rhetorical practices, Native Studies theory, and “decolonized” ethnographic methods to strengthen community-identified assets and serve community-identified needs. Together, we will explore the complex intersections of race and history in the local environment and build relationships across difference. We will design a rich community-engaged project, working directly with tribal members in developing a dynamic digital archive of community stories.

This course employs an interdisciplinary set of tools for analyzing women’s experiences and studies the ways that sex and gender manifest themselves in social, cultural, and political contexts. This course does not only consider differences between women and men, but also explores differences among women. The readings and discussion will be designed to examine ideas about race, class, sexuality and other aspects of identity in addition to gender. Together we will discuss the relationships among these categories, and will analyze when and how such categories operate throughout American history and into contemporary society.

On the track, “American Dreamin’,” from his 2007 American Gangster album, emcee and industry icon Jay -Z provides an important intervention into our critical thinking about the precarious nature of pursuing the American dream at the end of the twentieth and start of the twenty-first century. Speaking to (and for) millennial and postmillennial generations, Jay -Z elucidates how old attitudes about attaining success and wealth in the United States, as promoted under the banner of the “American Dream,” require reexaminations of our national heritage. Specifically, Jay -Z challenges the notion that education and hard work are ultimately what provide opportunities for social mobility and prosperity, and instead champions a narrative and ethos of American criminality as truer to attaining recognition and riches in the United States. // This course will investigate the nuances between criminality, illegality, and American dreaming as dramatized within hip hop as a cultural form, and particularly as can be explored in the biography and discography of the African American emcee Jay -Z. Conflicts that arise between racial identity and pursuits of the American dream, as well as regional, class, and gender dynamics important to the “pursuit of happiness” in the U.S. will also be investigated.
